JACOB PERKINS,

HAVING invented an effectual check for detecting counterfeit Bank Paper, which has received the sanction of one Bank, and the approbation of the undersigned eminent artists, and having obtained a patent, securing to him, and to his assigns, the exclusive right of the invention, hereby offers to his fellow citizens the privilege of using it upon terms, to be agreed on between him and any person disposed to avail themselves of a guard against counterfeits.

THE undersigned having examined Jacob Perkin's new invented method to detect counterfeit Bank paper, do approve of the plan, it being impossible to engrave or sink two plates perfectly alike, without the original die or hub, the counterfeiter would find it impossible to make an impression which would perfectly gage with the check from the original die.

One Hundred Dollars Reward.

RAN away from the Subscriber, on Tuesday the second of this inst. April, living in Kent county, Maryland, near Chester Town, the following described Negroes, viz. William, about 5 feet 5 or 6 inches high, a yellowish complexioned fellow, about thirty years of age, formerly the property of doctor William Matthews, he has been very much given to running away, and has been so often described in the public papers within this twelve months that any further description of him seems needless.—Jacob, about 6 feet high, and about 32 years of age, of a common Negroe complection, down look, his little finger of his left hand stands straight, occasioned by the cut of a sickle. Patt, the wife of said Jacob, about 27 years of age, a small light made woman of a yellowish complection, with thick lips for an American of her stature, she is a very good needle woman, and spins on either small or great wheel, and is very handy in any common house work.—Two children of the said Jacob's and Patt's, the one a male child about four years old, the other a female child about two years old. The above described Negroes took with them, besides their own wearing apparel, three coats, two of which were linsey cloth of a light grey color, both new; one of the two was a great deal too large for either of the said fellows; the other coat of brown cloth, half worn; three under jackets, one a velvet, another a drab, the other a light colored linsey cloth do, one new pair of Calf skin shoes, lined with linnen and bound with leather, one pair of boots remarkably large in the legs, several pairs of stockings and a silver watch, all stolen: their own wearing apparel as follows—William had on a light horse regimental coat worked with silver twist, (which coat he had when he was brought home to me the first of February last, a round sailor jacket (blue,) thickset breeches, patched with corduroy in the stride, with other necessary clothing. Jacob, two linsey cloth coatees, lead colored, one new the other half worn, blue linsey cloth jacket, half worn, two pairs of linsey cloth trowsers, of a lead colour, the one new the other half worn, tolerable good shoes and stockings. Patt has every day cloathing, and her children wore home-made linen and linsey, her other cloathing not so well known; it is uncertain which course they may take, as William is such an experienced coaster.

Any person or persons apprehending said negroes or sounding them, so that their master may get them again, shall be entitled to the above reward, or in proportion for either of them, that is to say, 40 dollars for each of the fellows, and twenty dollars for the wench and children, and if brought home, all reasonable charges paid by

BENSON GEARS.

N. B.—All masters of vessels and others, are forbid harboring them at their peril. B. G.

WELL acquainted with the mercantile business, also a judge of the forms of establishing rights to houses and lands, in the states of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, N and S. It may happen that one person's business would not afford the expences, or be an object for one person to go purposely, but it may happen also that a number may have business to do in the same state, or adjacent states, and then the expences will come light upon each. JUST PUBLISHED,

By Wm. YOUNG,

Embellished with an emblematical plate,

THE HISTORY OF THE DESTRUCTION

HELVETIC UNION AND LIBERTY.

By J. MALLET DU PAN.

ITS situation (Switzerland's) is correctly and energetically drawn in the picture of Athens, left us by a writer of the middle ages, after the invasion of Alaric, It is the empty and bloody skin of an immolated victim! She has nothing left but ROCKS, RUINS and DEMAGOGUES!

Preface, p. 5.

 That the people of the United States may profit by the errors and calamities of Switzerland, is the object of the present undertaking. Here, the same means are employed, the same engines set at work, which, in their destructive progress, annihilated the Helvetic Union and Liberty. Those who have a Union and Liberty to preserve, will do well to attend to the pages of Mallet Du Pan, and from his interesting details, wise maxims, and sagacious instructions, learn the salutary lessons drawn from the downfal of his own country.

Also—POEMS on various Subjects, by Robert Southey, Author of Joan of Arc.

"It can scarcely be necessary for us formally to recommend this little volume to the notice of our poetical readers, and its author to their esteem. No one who possesses a true relish for Poetry, we conceive, will open with indifference, a volume by the author of Joan of Arc. Genius is a despotic power, and irresistibly commands homage."

The History of Pennsylvania,

By ROBERT PROUD,

In two octavo volumes.

A work entirely new, original, and highly interesting; embellished with a Portrait of the head of WILLIAM PENN, and a new Map of Pennsylvania, New-Jersey, Maryland, and the State of Delaware, and parts adjacent.

IN this publication are exhibited the remarkable rise, happy progress, and extraordinary prosperity of that province, till near the time of the declared independency of the United States of America; effected by such uncommon and pacific means such singular, just and prudent policy, as appear no where in the history of nations, to have so generally, and so extensively prevailed, in any other country, to an equal degree of advancement, importance, and felicity of the people, and so generally to have excited the admiration of all observers, as in the flourishing and happy state of the province of Pennsylvania:—proper to be known and remembered by all those, who wish to be informed in the extraordinary melioration of this country, and in the means of rendering the inhabitants so happy and prosperous in former time; as well as an egregious example for posterity and surrounding states to imitate and improve upon, &c.

Foreign Intelligence.

LONDON, March 3.

We have still to notice the non-arrival of the Hamburgh mails, fourteen of which are this day due. The length of time that has elapsed since the thaw, and the number of days during which the wind, though adverse, has been moderate, begins to render this interruption of our communication with the continent unaccountable, and when added to several other circumstances, somewhat alarming.

By a broken series of Paris papers which arrived in the early part of the week, it appears that on the 1st ult. citizen Marragon, the French minister at Hamburg, declared to the senate that his public functions in their city had ceased. Such intimations, when given by the agents of the haughty French directory, have seldom failed to be followed by hostilities. It would not then be very surprizing, if the French, recollecting the benefits they derived from the frost in Holland, which chained the Dutch shipping to their ports, should have availed themselves of a like favorable occasion to seize upon Hamburgh, and the immense mass of merchandize that lies weatherbound within its walls.

The north-eastern provinces of Holland, (Groninguen and Friezland) which are adjacent, not to say contiguous, to Hamburgh, would afford them the means of striking with promptitude a blow as favorable to their schemes of plunder, as it would be ruinous to that object of their inveterate enmity the British commerce—a blow that would be felt throughout this whole island; and that would produce particular distress and consternation in this great trading city.

That such an event is not altogether out of the contemplation of government, seems to be strongly implied by the orders given to detain the packets at Yarmouth, till there shall be some arrival from the continent.

It has long been matter of surprise to many, that so tempting a bait to republican rapacity as Hamburgh, should so long have escaped their fangs; and indeed their abstinence is not to be easily accounted for, unless we suppose that they wanted a pretence, or the consent of the cabinet of Berlin. We have seen too much of their address in negociation; and too much of the vigour of their councils and their arms, to be able to say that they may not have obtained the acquiescence of the king of Prussia, or have disdained to ask it; and as to a pretence, they certainly have found one in the obstinate detention of Irishmen bearing commissions in the service of the republic.

By letters from General Dundas, at the Cape of Good Hope, we are happy to learn that the Scotch brigade and the 84th regiment sailed for India on the 4th of November, 1,900 strong, in excellent order. The boys that were enlisted in the Scotch brigade, when it was raised, were all grown up, stout and healthy; and in the front ranks. The general recommended enlisting boys in preference to men.

Private accounts from Bengal inform us, that the king of Ava has signified his intention of visiting the supreme government, for which purpose uncommon preparations were making throughout his country, in a style of great magnificence. The object of this visit is said to be to congratulate the new governor general, the earl of Mornington; and to submit a commercial plan, which the king of Ava has suggested for the benefit of the two countries.

NASSAU, March 26.

Arrived here the privateer schooner John and Edward, Miller, from a cruise.

Extract from the John and Edward's Log Book.

"Thursday, March 14, 1799, at 1 P. M. off Bay Fundy, in chace of a sail to windward, but discovering a sail to leeward, which we plainly saw was a large vessel, gave chace, and at four o'clock came within musket shot; hoisted our union jack, and hailed him, which was answered by hoisting an American ensign and firing three guns right into us—we hailed him several times, and informed him that we were a British privateer; he paid no attention to that, but kept a continued fire upon us. We then commenced firing in return, gave him four broad sides, and boarded on the lee-quarter. When we got upon deck, found the cook killed and the rest run below. The captain being ordered upon deck, informed us he was from Jamaica, bound to New-York. The vessel proved to be the ship Cygnet, capt. Gore, of New-York, whom we kept charge of three days, and then discharged them."

March 29.

Yesterday morning the privateer Mary Anne, Maxcy, returned from a cruise, with two valuable prizes, viz. two Feluccas from Cadiz, having on board fifty tons of quicksilver, a quantity of stamped paper, &c. &c. the property of the Spanish government.

Both these vessels are commanded by king's pilots, and sailed in company with eight others from Cadiz, on the night of February 12th, for La Vera Cruz.

At that time, there were fourteen British ships of the line, and several frigates cruising off Cadiz. The Feluccas being remarkably fast sailers, and favored by the night, and a strong breeze off the land, soon got clear of the British squadron; but were chased almost constantly afterwards, until they were taken in the Old Straits on the 23d inst. by the Mary Anne.

The masters of one of the Feluccas says, that the last accounts respecting Buonaparte that he had heard at Cadiz, represented his being at Cairo. He also says, that Malta had surrendered to the British; and that the Neapolitans had been severely worsted in several actions with the French.

This day a vessel arrived in sixty hours from Havanna.

The assembling a large force on the Isle of Wight, had been construed by the Spanish government into a design of an immediate attack on Cuba; and orders from Madrid, dated the 7th of January, were received about a month since by the governor of Cuba to make every possible preparation for defence.

In consequence of these orders, upwards of thirty thousand men, of all colours and descriptions, have been actually embodied, and drawn to Havanna and its vicinity; and large magazines of provisions and military stores are now forming.

Admiral Bligh, with the Queen, Thunderer and York, and four or five frigates, is cruising between the Dry Tortugas and cape Antonio. All intercourse between the Havanna and the Main, is thereby prevented; and so alarmed are the people at La Vera Cruz, that not satisfied with detaining the money ships in port, in order to have the treasure in greater security, they recently had it landed.

The Spanish ordinance against the use of British manufactures, issued in consequence of orders from the French directory to the degraded humble court of Spain, has been promulgated throughout Cuba; and all intercourse with the British colonies peremptorily interdicted. At the same time neutral vessels are allowed to load with produce in all the ports of Cuba.

April 2.

In a French prize brig, sent in since our last, have been found a number of official dispatches from general Toussaint, and commissary Roume, to the minister of marine and other heads of departments at Paris.

By these it appears that a very strange game is playing in St. Domingo. Toussaint disclaims all idea of erecting an independent government in that island, avows the strongest attachment and most profound respect to the French republic, accuses Hedouville of the grossest misdemeanors, and expresses an anxious wish to be relieved from the fatigues and dangers of his actual situation.

Commissary Roume, in his letter to the secretary of the executive directory, trusts that credit will be allowed him for what he has accomplished, and that in the actual state of parties and things, nothing more could be effected.

PETERSBURG, Nov. 10

The Treaty with Britain is highly applauded by our merchants. No connection indeed could be of more benefit to this country, than one with that nation. By a list just published of all the exports from this port, for the current year, it appears that of 1053 foreign ships that loaded at this port 609 were British, excepting about eighteen, were for their own dominions.

I am informed that the last mentioned article is occasioned by the high price in Britain and Ireland, which has induced your Government to permit the Navy Contractors to purchase here, where it has, in general, been bought, barrels included, below 10s. British the hundred weight. If your Government should draw the connexion between the two countries still closer, we shall be able to support the British armies and navy, even in their West India Islands, cheaper than they can have it from America.

Moreover, among the articles exported by the britsh, were 9000 barrels salted above beef, of which no other nation will take a barrel.

HAMBURGH, Jan. 22.

The refusal of his Prussian majesty to give any decision with respect to the Irishmen detained here, had involved us in embarrassment, but it was hoped that the business would have remained in its actual state until the conclusion of peace which might set the prisoners at liberty. All our apprehensions on this topic are again renewed, as Mr. Crawfurd, minister of his Britannic majesty, to the Circle of Lower Saxony, has received despatches from his government, which not only approve the conduct he has held, but direct him positively to insist that the Senate shall instantly give up the prisoners to Britain. Should this demand be refused, he is directed to withdraw from Hamburgh, and declare that the King, his master considers the refusal as a declaration of war, and our Senate is involved in new troubles. Its decision is impatiently expected. Pichegru after his arrival here from Britain, stopped only two days and then proceeded on his journey. It is not known to what place he is going.

RASTADT, Feb. 2

The following answer has been sent by the emperor relative to the Russian troops:

1. His Imperial Majesty is surprised that the French ministers should have addressed themselves to the Deputation for the pacification of the empire upon a subject with which it has no concern.

2. His Imperial majesty testifies his satisfaction that the deputation has unanimously referred this affair, upon which it was not competent to decide to those whom it concerns and who ought to be acquainted with it.

3. His Imperial majesty will, however, wait for the report which shall be made to him on this subject by the Diet of Ratisbon.

A Spanish Courier passed through this place this morning, on his way from Vienna to Paris. He brought dispatches to citizen Boccardy, the Ligurian minister, the contents of which have induced him to send off his valet de chambre as a courier to Genoa. It is reported that the duke des Deux Ponts the Prince of Nassau Weilburg, and some other Princes of the Right Bank of Prussia are to repair to Berlin. The object of their journey is to prevail on his majesty to interpose his mediation with France, that in case of a rupture with Austria, France may acknowledge the neutrality of the Empire, and continue the negociations respecting the secularizations. The note delivered to the Count de Lehrbach, has excited here a considerable degree of agitation. It is pretended that the Prussian ministers will immediately deliver in a note, which will make known the intentions of their Court in the present conjuncture of affairs.

LONDON, March 2.

On account of the preparations made at Brest for a sailing of the fleet now ready for sea at that port, the Board of Admiralty has taken due precautions. Three sail of the line, from Plymouth, have joined Sir C Thompson, at Torbay; and Vice Admiral Lord Hugh Seymour, with three sail more, is ready at St. Helen's to put to sea. These make a force, when joined to the squadron under Sir Charles Thompson, in Torbay, equal in number to the whole ships in Brest Road.

The quantity of naval stores to be sent by government this season, for the service of his majesty's squadrons on the East India station, and at the Cape of Good Hope, amount to upwards of seven hundred tons. The Cape is appointed the depot for the receipt and distribution of this article.

We understand that an order has, within these few days, been issued by his Royal Highness the Commander in Chief, for all the Officers belonging to regiments on the British establishment to join their respective corps forthwith, and to hold themselves in constant readiness.

Major Semple Lisle, so well known to the public arrived at Spithead a few days ago, in his majesty's ship Brilliant. It appears, that after the mutiny on board the Lady Shore, he was landed with the officers and others on the coast of Brazil; he came from thence to Lisbon, and offered himself to the d spoal of the Crown, through his majesty's envoy, Mr. Walpole; but his appearance not being demanded in Britain he went, it seems, to Barbary, where he was employed by the emperor of Morocco. Some time after his establishment in that country, ministers having sent to Mr. Walpole at Lisbon, to send him home in custody, Mr. Walpole had no other resource than to send to the Major, and acquaint him with the order of the Minister: upon which the Major surrendered himself immediately to Lord St. Vincent, who sent him to Lisbon, and thence his voyage has been continued on board the Brilliant.

SLAVE TRADE.

Mr. Wilberforce rose to make his promised motion for the immediate abolition of the Slave Trade. He entered very fully into the merits of this question; and concluded with moving for leave to bring in a bill to abolish the Slave Trade and as this was a question of trade, he farther moved, that the House resolve itself into a Committee, to consider of the said motion. This, after a debate which continued till one o'clock in the morning, was rejected by a majority of thirty; there being.

LATE STORM IN ENGLAND.

Letters from Yarmouth, of the 7th state, that the mails had been conveyed to and from that town by foot and horsemen for a week, carriages being unable to travel. The up and down London mail coaches arrived in sight of each other near Saxmundham, where they stuck fast. The coach from Norwich was similarly circumstanced at Walton, twelve miles from that city; and one of the Yarmouth coaches was on Friday still blocked up at Lowestoff. Numerous vehicles of different descriptions have been upset with inconsiderable damage, amongst which it is related that a hearse, returning from Bugton to Botesdale, fell, with three of its horses twenty feet into a gravel pit near Barton, without either of them or the driver receiving the smallest injury.

The Mail Coach from Shrewsbury, on Saturday morning, stuck in the snow in Tilworthfield, from whence the guard carried the Mail some way, and then obtained a chaise, which being unable to get forward, he proceeded with his Mails on horseback to London. Nor was the Worcester Mail coach more fortunate; the passages which had been cut through the former snow upon that and other roads, having been filled by the heavy drifts of Friday night the Guard was obliged to leave the coach blocked up at Nettlebed, from whence he proceeded, occasionally walking and riding, to London.

A horse fastened by a chain to his leg, on the Hoe, near Plymouth, was, on the night of the 4th frozen to death.

Mr, Pendlebury, of Chester, was crushed to pieces by one of his waggons, in consequence of the chain breaking, by which the wheel had been fastened, in coming down a hill in Denbighshire. The wife of a soldier of the Worcester Provincial cavalry, was frozen to death on the baggage waggon, between Liverpool and Chester; and on the same day John Manley, returning from Shrewsbury, perished in the snow, near Baschurch.

The Mail guards that arrived in town on Saturday declare they never experienced so severe a night as that of Friday. The storm of hail was so driven against their faces, as to numb and swell them.

A few days ago, as some persons were travelling over Stolling Down, near Cambridge, they were struck by the cries of a child at a little distance from the road. when they proceeded to the spot from whence the cries came, and, shocking to relate, they discovered 2 children, the one almost frozen to death, and the other quite dead. The parents of the above children had sent them to purchase coals, but owing to the great depth of the snow, they lost their way, and had it not been for the providentially passing of these persons, the other must have perished also.

The waggon of Messrs. Catchpole and Hazel was upset on Ballindon hill, as was the Lynn double coach into a pit between Barkway and Cambridge, but the people and horses were, though with much difficulty, dug out alive.

The second fall of snow has so completely blocked up the Newmarket road, that three passengers coming to town by the Norwich mail could not proceed any farther than Bournbridge. One of the superintendants, whom the post-office have employed to diminish, as far as possible, the ill-effects to correspondence, proceeded with the guard on two of the horses; and, by great exertions and risk, arrived with the mails in London, though too late for Saturday's delivery.

A young man named Coleman, returning from Reculver to Hearn, lost his way in the snow, and was frozen to death; as were a woman, from the same cause, near the ferry at Rye; and a broom carrier named Fuller, within a quarter of a mile of his own habitation, near Ripe.

A gentleman, who should have arrived by the Chester mail, relates, that from Northampton, which he left on Friday night, he got on tolerably well, notwithstanding the violence of the driving snow, to Broughton Field, from whence the guard for two miles, explored a passage for the horses, which could with difficulty be made to face the storm. At length arriving at Hockliff, he found, among numerous other coaches that had left Northampton some hours before his, and were unable to get farther, the Manchester mail; and was told by persons that had returned with horses of the heavy Coventry and Chester coaches, that they and their passengers were stuck fast in the snow on Chalk hill. The dawn having by this time broke, he, with one of the superintendants of the post-office and the guard, set off on horses, by riding which, with much difficulty, to Dunstable, and taking a chaise with six horses from thence, they arrived with the mail at the general post office at half past 12 on Saturday.

Our letters from various parts of the country are filled with accounts of accidents occasioned by the very severe weather. Inquests have been taken by John Ingle, gent. one of the coroners for Cambridgeshire, on the bodies of Rebecca Freeman, 60 years of age, frozen to death on the road leading from Ickleton to Chesterford; John Limmer, shepherd to Mr. Frost, of Wood Ditton, froze to death on Newmarket Heath; Abraham Rooks, found dead on the road near Little Abingdon; and Wm. Bennett, froze to death in a field near Hardwicke.

A poor woman of Impington, named Woodcock, has been missing since yesterday se'nnight, and is supposed to have perished in the snow. She left Cambridge about six o'clock in the evening before, and notwithstanding a diligent search, her body has not yet been found.

On Tuesday, an officer's servant belonging to the West Suffolk Militia, was found near the Newmarket turnpike, supposed to have lain in the snow since Saturday. A faithful dog was found lying near his deceased master, buried in the snow, by whose barking the body was discovered.

Tuesday last, a melancholy accident happened on Hampton Court Green: As Quarter Master Colsten, of the 16 Light Horse was kicking a foot ball, he tripped up, and falling with his breast on a lump of ice or congealed snow, was killed on the spot.

At the commencement of the late severe frost, a boy who was an apprentice to a farmer Pring's in West Buckland, near Willington, Somerset, ran away from his master, and secreted himself in one of his out houses at a distance from the farm house, where he remained for three days with no other sustenance than what he had secured in his pockets: at the end of which time he was discovered with his feet and legs frostbitten and no medical assistance being immediately procured, his feet and legs absolutely rotted nearly to the calf, so that they ware obliged to be both taken off, Notwithstanding the severity of this operation, he is now in a very fair way of recovery.

A few days ago two women were found dead at Weeden, near Aylesbury, Bucks; they had perished in consequence of the severity of the weather. One of them was known in the neighbourhood, but the other was a stranger, and had an infant in her arms, which was closely pressed to her bosom, the little innocent was alive when its parent's body was discovered, but expired in a short time afterwards.

A letter from Newcastle, of Saturday's date, says, "The country has seldom been buried under so great a depth of snow as at present. In many parts the roads are full up to the hedges, and a passage can be obtained by cutting only. Many lives, we are afraid, will be lost in the snow; as yet we have heard with certainty but one in this neighbourhood. Mrs. Pigg of Cullercoats, who left North Shields yesterday se'night in the afternoon, to return home, was found in a drift, not far from her own house on the Saturday morning. She was missed on the Friday evening, and the most diligent search was made for her, but unfortunately without success.

COMMUNICATION.

MR. FENNO,

IN your paper of the 13th inst. I observed a piece addressed to "friends and fellow citizens" soliciting the interest of the public, in favor "of Thomas M'Kean the present Chief Justice of Pennsylvania," to choose him Governor thereof, when Mr. Mifflin's time expires, the address is signed by Peter Muhlenburgh, Samuel Miles, Tench Coxe, Michael Leib, A. J. Dallas, William Penrose.

"Of the personal merits and public services of Thomas M'Kean," they say, "it is surely unnecessary at this period to furnish a detail," at the same time above one third part of the address is taken up with saying, who he is, what offices he has filled in public life, his virtues in private life, and, "that his mind has been preserved from the taint and corruptions of pecuniary speculations," and a number of other excellencies of mind and body, which in their view, he possesses.

The signers of themselves are modestly silent—But let it not be said in Pennsylvania, that modesty and merit like theirs, shall remain unknown and unrewarded. Before we enter into an examinatiion of the public or private virtues of Mr. M'Kean, it is a duty owing to these "friends and fellow citizens" whom they address, as well as the good people of the State, to inform them who these signers are, from whence they will be enabled to know by whom they have been thus insulted, and determine what truth can be placed in their publication—

Be it remembered then, that

Peter Muhlenburg, has a head; and so has a pin.

Samuel Miles, came to reside in this city when young, and through the opinion of some of his friends was introduced into several public stations; but how often are good men mistaken in their choice of men, perhaps, in no instance more than in the object before us—instead of increasing years adding wisdom to his age, they have found him, "stiff in opinion, and always in the wrong," deserting his post, and joining himself to idols—being possessed of a fortune he retired into the country where his friends hoped, he would spend the remainder of his days in peace; but alas! with empty noddle and supercilious pride, he rushes forth in the plentitude of his folly, and becomes one of the Trumpeters to his brother-in-law M'Kean's fame—Whether he can understand the address he has signed is yet to be proved.

Tench Coxe. Oh Coxe! which are we most to admire, thy Impudence, Cowardice, or Guilt? In the early stage of the American contest against Great-Britain, and when things looked favorable to the latter, Janus, in expectation of receiving some emolument, if in the event, it should turn out as he wished and expected, deserted his country in the hour of danger, and joined the British camp. What sacrifices he made on the British altar to curry their favor may not be known; but some he assuredly made, otherwise, he would not have been permited to remain so long with them, come into this city in triumphal cavalcade with them and riot with them in their hostile rejoicings.—Charity leads us to suppose he did not slay his thousands, but there can be no doubt that the blood of some American Patriot slain in defence of his country stains the ground, and like Abel's of old cries to heaven for vengeance against such treachery and crimes. After independence was established, his assurance prompted him, to solicit a place of office; by flattery and a fawning behaviour he gained his suit—From the last office which he occupied he was dismissed, and those who had the power of dismissal can give the reason why—in the course of 2 years of the war, he took 3 oaths of allegiance; first to his country, the second to the British, and the third to his country again—What other oath he hath since taken, and to whom, time and success in pecuniary affairs will unravel. On the whole he hath verified what has been said of, a double faced patriot, a man "may smile and smile again, and be a villain."—

A. J. Dallas—Your name and Fame will not be forgotten, while Fauchet's letter remains to tell the tale. The origin and pedigree of this man is a secret unknown here, unless to himself, and he is not fool enough to tell us—It is known, however, that he strolled as an emigrant into this city, long since the revolutionary war—That about 9 years ago he was appointed by the present Governor his Secretary, and consequently that of the State and has continued in that station ever since, governing in all things with as much ease, as the conjuring old Doctor Wilt at Germantown, made his puppet dance up and down in a bottle of spirits, by stopping and unstopping a hole left in the cork for air—by flattery and cunning he has dipped into all the artful politics of the time, and been the conductor of a Democratic club, and other violent designs...—Whether he has (as he and his fellow trumpeters say of M'Kean) preserved his hands from the taint and corruptions of pecuniary speculations, his mode of suddenly emerging from the lowest obscurity to extravagance of show and pride, the world can best judge—so true is the old proverb verified in him, that one would be apt to believe it were made to represent him, "Set a beggar on horseback, and he will ride to the devil."

Matthew Leib & William Penrose, come so near to the Genus of the Gander Tribe, that they may be left like them to hiss and cry Quaac, Quaac, when no danger is near.

Having represented on a small scale a few traits of the characters of M'Kean's trumpeters, what will you think, when you come to consider part of their address, on the larger scale of public wrongs? While Rebellion against the Federal Government is rearing its head in the Northern part of the same State in which these Trumpeters live, and over which M'Kean is to be made Governor, and while numbers of ignorant and deluded creatures, are now on their tryal for High Treason, these very Trumpeters in their address at this time are declaring to the people that they wish, "to waken vigilance against the pressure of present grievances, that an encrease of the public debt and expenditures, a corresponding augmentation of FEDERAL TAXES & imposts, an extensive establishment of land and naval force, a marked disregard of the national militia, and the introduction of impolitic laws, are EVILS which a bad administration may produce, but which a good administration will be able to correct" and further, "that if we review the conduct of men in power, we shall find the emoluments of public office are only bestowed on the partisans of administration, that the authority of the individual States is held in contempt, and that republicanism itself is considered as an idle phantom"—the greatest part of the address contains ideas similar to these extracts, and they will no doubt be sufficient to show to the world, from whence the Rebellion in 1796, and the present one afloat, have drawn their spirit of disaffection to the Federal Government; have not publications of this kind a manifest tendency to alienate the affections and support of the citizens from the general government? If they are so in a legal sense, why are they permitted to be published at this time of public danger, and in the very teeth of government, and no notice taken of the framers and abettors of them?

Mr. M'Kean's trumpeters further say, "from the energy of such a character as his (M'Kean) much may be expected, and much will certainly be required"—Is the peace and happiness of the good citizens of Pennsylvania to be disturbed by the interference of this man, or if he should be unfortunately chosen Governor, are we to be thrown in a state of Civil War, unless all the (trumpt up) Grievances of which the Address say, are wickedly and unjustly imposed on us, be done away? A FEDERALIST.

Health Office,

APRIL 22, 1799.

The term of service, for which the present managers of the marine and city hospitals were appointed, having nearly expired, the board are impelled, by motives of duty, and sentiments of unusual esteem, to express their unreserved approbation of the conduct of capt. William Jones, during his presidency. The promptness with which he at all times discharged the duties of his office, would alone have secured the regard of his associates, and an indispensable claim to the attributes of disinterestedness and public spirit—but his humane and unremitted exertions to alleviate the miseries of our fellow citizens during the prevalence of the late awful and desolating calamity, evinced a benevolence of heart honorable to humanity, and excited in the minds of his fellow members, sentiments of uncommon regard, admiration and gratitude. Influenced by these considerations, they therefore, resolve to insert in the records of their transactions, this small and well-earned tribute to his merit.

By order of the Board of Managers,

WILLIAM DAWSON, Chairman.

Attest,

TIMOTHY PAXSON, Clerk.

In the British sloop of war Camilla, capt. Larkins, which sailed from Chester a few days past, for Jamaica, went passengers, General Maitland, Col. Grant, and Col. Nightingale, with their suit.

The Sons of St. George met on Tuesday, in this city, agreeably to appointment, and after dinner, they drank the following toasts:

1. The Day and the Sons of St. George wherever dispersed.
2. The President of the United States, the firm supporter of his country's rights.
3. The King of Great-Britain, the scourge of anarchy and despotic tyrants.
4. Lieutenant General Washington, whose bravery in the field and wisdom in the cabinet, has deservedly rendered him the pride and glory of his country.
5. The Sons of Herman.
6. The Sons of St. Andrew.
7. The Sons of St. Patrick.
8. The Sons of St. David.
9. The Fair Sex; may they ever reward with countless pleasures the brave defenders of their country.
10. The United States; may the wisdom and patriotism of her citizens afford energy and stability to her government.
11. Congress; may the members continue to enact laws adequate to the support of a great, free, powerful and independent nation.
12. The State of Pennsylvania; may the efforts of her real patriotic citizens be crowned with success.
13. Agriculture and commerce; may the husbandman and merchant find equal interest in unanimity and concord.
14. The wooden walls of Old England; may the names of these heroes, Howe, Jarvis, Duncan, Nelson, and Warren, be ever remembered with gratitude due to such distinguished merit.
15. The American Navy; may we never want a Truxton to defend and protect our rising empire.
16. National concord; perpetuity to that which exists between Great Britain and America.
